FOILS.

By Oliver Beatrice Mair.

"But you don't know Millicent at all when you talk this way, Vance. And it isn't fair to women generally and my friend particularly for you to continue this same old line of argument."

Winifred followed her brother into the room set apart for their fencing encounters and sat down rather dispiritedly upon the edge of a divan.

"Your defense of your friend is very loyal, my dear child," was the grandly patronizing reply, "but it does not invalidate in the least what I have said. A woman practicing medicine is as incongruous as a man trimming hats. Feminine hands were never meant for surgical operations."

"You are prejudiced, Vance," said Winifred, as she listlessly took the foil her brother offered her; "you didn't get a diploma, and I believe you're mad at all creation to think that Millicent succeeded where you failed."

A wave of crimson receded from Vance's face, leaving it quite pale.

"Must narrowness of vision be added to your shortcomings, Win?" he asked, with an evenness of tone his sister suspected.

"I don't care what you say to me," Winifred retorted; "you've tried to sit on me, more or less, all your life. But it's different with Millicent. She has been here four weeks now, and you are just as stubborn and rude as when she came. And though it has been hard work, with that little cripple sister of hers to support, the kindness of others in a measure helps her to forget the rough parts of her daily routine. But with it all she has seen your dislike of her, your pointed avoidance, your persistent snubs. I only hope she doesn't know the reason. I would rather have her think it was your aversion to her as a woman rather than your dislike of her beloved profession."

"As women practice it," said Vance, imperceptibly.

"Science, as well as art, is sexless," was Winifred's rejoinder, with an air of superiority.

"It's a tiresome subject, Win. Let's drop it. We always quarrel."

And with a smile meant to be conciliatory Vance thrust a face guard into his sister's lap.

But Winifred was in no mood for such sunny treatment. This discussion of Millicent was her hobby-horse, and the little animal, once trotted out for riding, pranced grandly at Winifred's slightest spur. Just now Winifred was inclined to curvet and execute possibly as well, so irritable had she become through the persistent coldness her brother had evidenced toward her dearest friend.

It was very tiresome, for the circumstance made matters somewhat awkward whenever an evening gathering of young folks was in order and Millicent could arrange to be one of Oakland's frolicsome set.

Winifred watched her brother make a number of passes in silence. Then she returned to the attack.

"Millicent has noticed your ungentlemanly attitude," pursued Winifred, in a tone of injured dignity.

"Has she complained to you?"

His sister shot him an indignant glance, was about to retort hotly, changed her mind and maintained a severe silence.

"For if she has," continued Vance, with unmistakable emphasis, "she further proves she is no doctor. Physicians don't talk much, Win. You know that."

"Then it's a good thing you failed to get your diploma," returned his sister, sharply.

"See here," said Vance, good-naturedly, "what's the use of losing your temper over this—or young woman? She—"

"She is my friend. She was my roommate at college, Vance. She has sacrificed her life for her little sister, and she is the dearest girl in the world."

Winifred's words poured forth with the vehemence of an incipient volcano.

Vance made a lunge at an unseen enemy, following it with such rapid movements that Winifred changed her position involuntarily. Her momentary trepidation turned to one of fierce indignation as Vance, between his rapid movements, jerked out:

"I can't tolerate—women doctors. They never know their business—lack courage and impose upon human credulity."

Winifred bounded from her position, her cheeks aflame, her eyes dancing like some living light. She opened her mouth to speak, but ere one word could issue the expression upon her brother's face caused her to turn toward the hanging draperies in the door to their right. For a moment a great calm seemed to rest upon her.

In the front of these curtains stood a tall girl whose striking characteristics seemed to be her clear eyes, limpid as fresh pools of water in the early spring, and her crown of nut-brown hair arranged coronal fashion upon a very womanly head.

It was Millicent, and Winifred struggled to stifle the gasp which had risen in her throat.

But Millicent's first words reassured her.

"Your mother said I'd find you here, Win," came in a voice which held no tremor; "I wanted to ask you if you would mind going with me on my rounds this morning?"

CHILDHOOD.

J. LEROY BOGGS.

Like the brooklet, full of glee,
Our early life was spent;
We breathed the air pure and free
As o'er the hills we went.

And often we would seek to find
A treasure hidden there,
In both the vales and hills combined—
Such was our only care.

The golden sun of early morn
With its beams so bright,
Could our resemblance more adorn
Than pen and paper might.

With golden beams she doth paint
A picture much more true
Than any hand could ever taint
With paints of any hue.

Such was our living, we're wont to say,
As true as morning's sun,
And have we grown to perfect day
In the race we have run.

Saw Death Near.

"It often made my heart ache," writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "to hear my wife cough until it seemed her weak and sore lungs would collapse. Good doctors said she was so far gone with consumption that no medicine or earthly help could save her, but a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery and persistent use of this excellent medicine saved her life." It's absolutely guaranteed for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung diseases. 50 cents and $1.00 at J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, and S. S. Combs & Sons, Campton, drug stores. Trial bottles free.

There is a great distinction between enthusiasm and rational reasoning; the former frequently makes the latter impossible.

Manly qualities demonstrate themselves in more ways than an exhibition of blood and brawn.

Says He Was Tortured.

"I suffered such pains from corns I could hardly walk," writes H. Robinson, Hillsborough, Ill., "but Bucklen's Anker Salve completely cured them." Acts like magic on sprains, bruises, cuts, sores, scalds, burns, boils, ulcers. Perfect healer of skin diseases and piles. Cure Guaranteed, 25c per box by J. T. Day, Hazel Green, or S. S. Combs & Sons, Campton.

Education is the egg that experience hatches into activity.

Sued Vanderbilts for Railroad Tax

On Dec. 27, at Maysville, Ky., State Auditor's Agent Watson filed suit against W. K. Vanderbilt and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, as individuals, and against the latter as executor of Cornelius Vanderbilt, to compel them to list their stock and the Maysville & Big Sandy and the C. & O. railroads for taxation under the Kentucky statutes.

He alleges their stock is worth $62,000,000, and the suit is for ten years' back taxes.

Children Especially Liable.

Burns, bruises and cuts are extremely painful and if neglected often result in blood poisoning. Children are especially liable to such mishaps because not so careful. As a remedy DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is unequalled. Draws out the fire, stops the pain, soon heals the wound. Beware of counterfeits. Sure cure for piles. "DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured my baby of eczema after two physicians gave her up," writes James Mock, N. Webster, Ind. "The sores were so bad she soiled two to five dresses a day."

H. F. PIERATT.

Some words are more effective than blows; more decisive than action. Wounds may be healed; lies leave a memory of untruth behind them forever.

A Profitable Investment.

"I was troubled for about seven years with my stomach and in bed half my time," says E. Denick, Somerville, Ind., "I spent about $1,000 and never could get anything to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." You don't live by what you eat, but by what you digest and assimilate. If your stomach doesn't digest your food you are really starving. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does the stomach's work by digesting the food. You don't have to diet; eat all you want. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles.

H. F. PIERATT.

Did you ever notice the cut steel look that comes over a woman's face when she is battling between avarice and love?

Don't Live Together.

Constipation and health never go together. DeWitt's Little Risers promote easy action of the bowels without distress. "I have been troubled with costiveness 9 years," says J. O. Greene, Depauw, Ind. "I have tried many remedies but Little Early Risers give best results."

Hair Falls

"I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor to stop my hair from falling. One-half a bottle cured me."

J. C. Baxter, Braidwood, Ill.

Ayer's Hair Vigor is certainly the most economical preparation of its kind on the market. A little of it goes a long way. It doesn't take much of it to stop falling of the hair, make the hair grow, and restore color to gray hair.

"What is it?" Anything wrong?" demanded Winifred.

"Yes, Vance. I'm afraid—I've hurt him—he would play with the guards—there's a wound—"

But Winifred, with a cry, had flown to her brother's side. Her distracted cries pierced the ears of the other two, who had followed her.

"Oh! he's dying, he's dying! Millicent, Millicent, can't you do something? Oh, what shall we do?"

Millicent approached quickly but quietly. She knelt and unfastened Vance's cravat.

"He is not dead, dear," she said to Winifred; "he has simply fainted. That is natural. He is losing blood while you are talking."

"Tell me what to do and I'll do it. Oh, if he dies—"

"In the name of common humanity," interposed Ned, impatiently, "can't you do something?"

"It is a case of 'can' or 'will,' Mr. Price," said Millicent, quietly; "it is a case of whether I am to be allowed. I shouldn't care to begin and then find resistance. Mr. Bishop has an antipathy to women physicians. Better send for your physician, Winnie."

"I'll go," said Ned, and hurried out.

"And in the meantime he is to die? And because you won't help him?" Oh, Millicent!

A sob choked the further utterance of words. Millicent restrained an impulse to laugh.

"My dear, I've been holding the wound together. Your brother will not die—at least not from this. If you'll get me some bandages and my box of implements in my room, the bottom bureau drawer—"

"Good bless you!"

Winifred rose with alacrity, but she paused to say: "You don't think he'll die?"

"No, of course not."

Winifred vanished.

And with her went Millicent's indifference. She glanced hastily around, and upon assuring herself that no one was in the room, she examined the wound with far greater care than she had at first displayed. She listened eagerly to the heart beats. Her whole manner betrayed the keenest anxiety. A look of tenderness her friends had never seen crept into her luminous eyes. She bent over the impassive face with unmistakable yearning, but she drew back quickly as Vance stirred uneasily and opened his eyes.

He strove mechanically to draw away from the firm hand holding the wound together.

"I know you can't tolerate women doctors, Mr. Bishop. I feel your position as keenly as you do. Nevertheless you must admit my assistance is better than none, though possibly lacking in courage and not knowing my business."

"I didn't say that for you to overhear," he said.

And it was with almost a sigh that she turned as Dr. Olds entered with Ned and Winifred.

A Self-Made Victory.

"I can't understand how Doberly got reelected treasurer of our club."

"Why can't you?"

"Well, he got more votes than there were members present, and I have a hunch that didn't vote for him—"

gentlemen—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.

About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for earache, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only a temporary relief, that the ear would never be cured, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the ringing ceased, and today, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain

Very truly yours,
